The wonder of the romance of America is still felt by many of the old world. Two Scotchmen have written to the secretary of the state of Vermont asking for work and giving their qualifications. They have been in the war for four years and undoubtedly have the wander-lust still in their veins and would like to make a fortune in the land of great opportunities. They could not vision the hundreds of idle soldiers in the green hills who have not yet been provided with a way to earn their bread.-Rut-

If the above-mentioned gentlemen were like most Scotchmen we have them. known they would have just gone aboard ship and sailed for this land of promise instead of press-agenting themselves the United States in the hope of getting some offers that promised them lucrative emoluments and not over-much effort, the United States heretofore have been ready to take their chances along with the others and have not been cabling over for soft berths and much hard cash. stuff which these would-be adventurers am. in fairyland seem to be made of. If at "bucking the wilderness" of America committee to meet them at the dock and frozen and leaking pipes, chimneys escort them to positions. Scotchmen of the rooms. A good beginning has been made toward better things, several fires the old-time type and not the clinging, tender vines thus represented.

We wonder that the Vermont secretary of state's office should lend itself as a vehicle to such a puerile plea as these so called Scotchmen put up.

RECOGNITION OF THE PATRIOTIC AMERICAN WOMEN.

It is somewhat tardy recognition, but none the less powerful, which General Pershing, commander of the American expeditionary forces, gives to the women Civil war. of the United States for their part in the winning of the war. During an inspection of five evacuation hospitals in the Rhineland area occupied by the Americans General Pershing took occaslon to say: "Without doubt America could not have carried out her part in the conflict as she did if it had not been for the willingness and courage of the nurses and others who came to care for sick and wounded in France and the loyal support of patriotic women at home. That last phrase of General Pershing's statement covers a multitude of considerations. The patriotic women at home were not doing the spectacular and the immediately helpful work that the American women abroad were doing in tenderly binding up the wounds of the soldiers and in caring for their material wants; but they were very essential to the success of the American war machine. These patriotic American women at home worked in many ways. They contributed to the success of the war by keeping a stiff upper lip though their sons and husbands were off on the battlefield, by atfending to the home cares in a thoroughly sane manner, by conserving food products when our allies were desperately in need of sustenance, by aiding in the various war drives during 1917-18 and by contributing hard work in the Red Cross workrooms and in the homes preparing articles of wearing upparel or articles to apply to the needs of wounded and sick soldiers and sailors. Few outside of the immediate circle of workers in these Red Cross societies know how self-sacrificingly, how unremittingly, how assiduously a large number of women plied the needle and the other implements needed in fashioning the articles which were so urgently demanded by the soldiers and sailors. And were General Pershing to know intimately of this splendid contribution which the women at home did toward winning the war he would give them even more praise for their devotion, for their patriotism and for their sacrifice. The part which some American women at home played in the war furnished one of the finest pages in the history of the United States' participation in the war.

WILLIAMSTOWN Sergt. Harrison Martin Having Time of

His Life in Alps-Brother in France Mr. and Mrs. George F. Martin have received several letters recently from their two sons, Policeman John L. Martin and Sergt, Harrison B. Martin, John is in France, and the two first letters are from him, the first dated Feb. 21, and written from Luneville.

"Received your ever welcome letter a few days ago and was sure glad to hear that you are all well. I am in the best of health at present. I am back in Luneville again, but I am going back to Frouard in a few days. This place is too lizzy for me. I haven't heard from Harison for a long time; am in hopes to oon. We hear that this company is to be sent back to the old outfit. Hope it is, We will then perhaps get home sooner, but don't look for me until I get there.
